Foreword from the Minister for Seniors

He Kupu Whakataki nā te Minita mō te Hunga Kaumātua

E āhukahukangia ana i konei tēnei mahi tahi a tātou ki te whakawhanake mai he rautaki e whai hua ai ki te katoa.

I am very pleased to present the Better Later Life Action Plan. This sets out the Government's priorities and commitments to deliver the Better Later Life – He Oranga Kaumātua strategy over the next three years.

The Better Later Life strategy launched in 2019 and work to deliver initial actions began immediately. However, last year the Government paused this work as we turned our attention to fighting the COVID-19 pandemic and managing New Zealand's economic recovery.

When the pandemic began, we acted swiftly to keep COVID-19 out and protect the health of older people. As a result few older New Zealanders have contracted the disease and far fewer have died. But nevertheless, COVID-19 has had a profound and lasting impact on our older population – including many who lost their jobs, struggled with the increased cost of renting a home, or faced the challenge of social isolation.

As we returned to the Action Plan, we recognised the need to focus more on actions that would contribute to New Zealand's recovery:

- supporting older workers to use their skills and experience and enabling employers to build a resilient, multigenerational workforce
- Ensuring there are a wide range of safe, secure and affordable options that meet older peoples' needs
- enabling older people to embrace technology as the world moves increasingly online – and ensuring those not online can still access the services they need day-to-day.

A major collaborative effort has gone into this plan and I'd like to thank everyone who has contributed to its development.

We have taken extraordinary steps to protect New Zealanders from COVID-19, particularly older New Zealanders. Together our team of five million has worked to keep each other safe. Our challenge now is to ensure every New Zealander is part of our recovery, and that we maintain support for the whole community.

My ministerial colleagues and I have committed to rise to this challenge. Working together we will ensure every New Zealander has a better later life.

Minister for Seniors

Hon Carmel Sepuloni
Minister for Social Development and Employment

Hon Poto Williams
Associate Minister of Housing (Social Housing)

Introduction

He Kupu Arataki

Better Later Life – He Oranga Kaumātua 2019 to 2034

is the Government's strategy for making the future better for older New Zealanders. Our goal is to recognise older people's potential and create opportunities for everyone to contribute and be valued.

Significant work has already been undertaken on initial actions we incorporated into the Strategy when it was published.

Since the Strategy was published, the Minister for Seniors set up and chairs a Ministerial Steering Group who meet regularly to oversee the Strategy's implementation. In February 2020 we developed indicators to track our progress against Strategy outcomes, and we published a baseline that we will report against.

COVID-19 has made significant changes to New Zealanders' lives. We put together a set of seven indicators to understand its impact on older people. The indicators consider income adequacy, unemployment, benefit receipt, loneliness, elder abuse, discrimination, and housing. We used this information to inform our priorities and guide development of this first Action Plan.

This plan summarises the actions that central government agencies will deliver to support Better Later Life – He Oranga Kaumātua in the period 2021 to 2024.

Vision

Priorities 2021–24

Employment – Supporting older workers to use their skills and experience and enabling employers to build a resilient, multigenerational workforce.

Housing – Ensuring there are a wide range of safe, secure and affordable options that meet older peoples' needs.

Digital inclusion – Enabling older people to embrace technology and ensuring everyone can access essential services.

Action areas

Achieving financial security and economic participation.

Promoting healthy ageing and improving access to services.

Creating diverse housing choices and options.

Enhancing opportunities for participation and social connection.

Making environments accessible.

Approach

He Tātai Mahi

We focus on 25 actions that government agencies will deliver in employment, digital inclusion and housing. We will also continue to deliver 10 initial actions that were published in the Strategy when it was launched.

This Action Plan will continue to evolve over time. Each action in the Plan is the responsibility of one or more government departments. The approach in this Action Plan is underpinned by the guiding principles of the Strategy.

This plan continues to use the following terms as defined in the Strategy

- We use older people mainly to refer to people aged 65+. This recognises the diversity of this age group – that people age differently and have different aspirations and needs.
- Because New Zealand does not have a legal retirement age, we use the phrase later life to refer to the years after reaching eligibility for New Zealand Superannuation (NZ Super).
- We use the phrase older workers to refer to people aged 50+ who are working or seeking work.

Resourcing the plan

Budget 2021 allocated $1.965 million over four years, to enable the Office for Seniors to implement Better Later Life – He Oranga Kaumātua 2019 to 2034.

With this funding the Office for Seniors will deliver the actions it is responsible for and coordinate and monitor the Action Plan's wider implementation.

Other actions will be resourced by the responsible departments within their existing funding. Resourcing requirements may change as actions develop.

Our Priorities Ā Mātau Whakaarotau

Employment

Te Ao Mahi

Our financial security depends on our ability to work, our income, and our savings. More than a third of New Zealand workers are over 50 years old, and a quarter of people stay working after they turn 65.

Much of our saving for later life happens after age 50. But this is also the period when job loss can have the biggest impact. A displaced worker aged over 50 is 11 percent less likely to find work within 5 years. Those who do get new jobs will see their earnings drop on average by a quarter.

Many people have not been able to work during New Zealand's COVID-19 lockdowns, and older workers have been advised to stay home even during lower alert levels. Some sectors could not supply services and many people in the service sector lost their jobs, disproportionately affecting Māori, Pacific people, and women.

BENEFITS OF A MULTIGENERATIONAL WORKFORCE

For older workers	For employers
Social connections	Better productivity
Physical activity	Availability of capable workers
Mentally stimulating	Wider skills and perspectives
Sense of purpose	Access to knowledge and experience
Financial security	Greater business resilience
	Multiskilled, adaptable teams

Housing

Te Noho Kāinga

For a small but growing number of older people, accessing secure, safe and affordable long-term housing can present a challenge. This affects the wider financial wellbeing of people for whom NZ Super is their primary source of income.

Since the start of the pandemic, the number of people aged 65+ who receive the accommodation supplement increased by approximately 12,000 – totalling 127,522 in March 2021.

At its worst, severe housing deprivation has significant consequences for older people. They may lack access to housing altogether or may only have access to sub-standard accommodation.

Older people and kaumātua should be able to continue to live in their communities or move closer to family and whānau. They need to have access to a broader range of housing options, including intergenerational living and smaller affordable housing, including rentals.

Digital inclusion

Te Ao Matihiko

In an increasingly digital world, digital inclusion has become essential for participation in our modern society and economy. Around a quarter of people aged 65+ do not have internet access, and more than 35% of people aged 75+ are not online. As services move online we must make sure those who do not have online access are not left behind.

Government and businesses have put more focus on online services since March 2020. Fewer locations have banks or postal services. The ongoing pandemic has also increased use of the internet to stay in touch with friends and family.

Digital inclusion is an end state where everyone has equitable opportunities to take part in society using digital technologies. It requires that individuals have access to the right devices and internet connections, have the skills to use them, are motivated to do so and trust that they will be safe in the online environment.

An Officials Steering Group works with the Office for Seniors to coordinate monitoring and reporting of the Action Plan. These groups will meet regularly to track progress on the implementation of the Action Plan, identify and mitigate risks, and adjust priorities.

We will report on progress on the Action Plan to the Government every two years. These reports will be published on the Office for Seniors website:
